

Our story

The results of climate change are visible all around us. Through continuous growth of the world population and our society's use of the Earth's natural resources, our planet is facing serious threats. Heat waves, drought, heavy rainfall and rising sea levels cause loss of land and crops.

And to make it worse, the people suffering from the effects of climate change are often not the people causing it. The richest part of the world has the most negative impact on climate change, but the least developed countries suffer the consequences the most.

This is neither fair, nor sustainable.

We believe that it's everyone's responsibility to make sure we provide future generations all over the world with a safe environment and sustainable livelihoods. It is time to bring about real change, before the impact of climate change are irreversible. At FairClimateFund, we work towards the reduction of global CO₂-emissions and creating sustainable livelihoods in developing countries.

Two for one.

Our goal is to make climate neutrality the norm and doing it Fairtrade. This means working towards a better climate and simultaneously making the most vulnerable people resilient to climate change.

Our solutions are carefully chosen to create a positive and lasting impact. From implementing efficient cooking solutions, planting and protecting trees to making our business partners climate neutral. In these things, we want to be as effective and lean as possible. Our work is effective because of our people-focussed, bottom-up approach. We don't like to just throw out numbers and we don't hide our results in stacks of paper. We make sure our impact is measurable and easy to understand.

That's what makes us tick.

But we can't do it alone. Together with all our partners, in the North and South, we can create a viable future for everyone by really reducing the impact of climate change and creating sustainable livelihoods for the most vulnerable people. The world may not be sustainable and fair today, but let's get up and do something about it, together!

Just follow our lead..
